COURT DECISIONS: 42; 89; 141; 192; 355; 498; 606.

Alabama. United States court of appeals for fifth circuit reversed district court's decision and held that the Bessemer, Alabama housing authority, in seeking to evict tenant from public housing project, must retroactively apply procedural requirements prescribed by circular of Department of Housing and Urban Development, 356.

California. Court of appeals held unconstitutional section 1166a of California code of civil procedure, which had allowed writ of immediate possession to be issued to landlord who filed affidavits to effect that tenant was insolvent and incapable of paying rent, 43. United States court of appeals rejected attack on constitutional grounds upon referendum, under California statute, nullifying zoning change that would have permitted construction of federally-financed housing low- and moderate-income families, 43. United States district court for northern district held that effect of referendum that annulled ordinance rezoning particular property for multi-family use did not constitute denial of equal protection for low-income residents, 355. United States District court for northern district held city ordinance, which regulated and restricted housing density in certain hilly areas of city, did not deny low-income families equal protection of laws, 356. Supreme court held that the California public school financing system was in violation of the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment. The court held that plaintiffs who sued in a class action, had adequately stated causes of action against defendant, 500.

Connecticut. The United States district court for the district of Connecticut held that plaintiff applicants were entitled to a preliminary injunction to restrain defendant housing authority of Norwalk, Connecticut from enforcing certain of its admission regulations, 607.

Florida. The United States district court for the southern district of Florida dismissed an action by the City of Hialeah, Florida, seeking to enjoin HUD from disbursing funds for public housing turnkey project on grounds that provision in 1954 appropriations act, on which city relied, was no longer in force, 607.

Georgia. United States district court for the northern district held that officials of Fulton County, by ordering the denial of building permits for two turnkey low-income public housing projects approved by the Atlanta Housing Authority and HUD, had violated the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment and the national housing policy of dispersing public housing, 500.

Illinois. United States court of appeals affirmed district judge's order requiring Chicago Housing Authority to submit proposed public housing sites, in white area, to city council for approval in accordance with specific timetable, 192. United States court of appeals held that the Department of Housing and Urban Development had violated the due process clause of the fifth amendment and Section 601 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 by knowingly acquiescing in an admittedly discriminatory housing program in Chicago, 498. The supreme court of Illinois held that, under regulations of the Department of Housing and Urban Development issued in February 1971, a tenant whose lease the Chicago Housing Authority sought to terminate on the grounds of undesirability was entitled to an administrative hearing to determine validity of the charges, 606. The United States district court, northern district of Illinois, invalidated appointments by the mayor of Chicago of members of a community council to participate in the planning of urban renewal activities, 608.

Massachusetts. The United States district court, district of Massachusetts, held that owners of a housing development subsidized under Section 221(d)(3) of the National Housing Act were not entitled to a preliminary injunction against the Boston rent board, 608.

Michigan. The United States district court, eastern district of Michigan, held that the City of Hamtramck and HUD had violated the statutory rights of black residents and also their equal protection rights under the Constitution, because urban renewal projects dispossessed or threatened to dispossess many black low-income residents and defendants failed to comply with requirements to provide relocation housing, 607.

Mississippi. United States court of appeals held that discriminatory provision of municipal services based on race violates equal protection clause of fourteenth amendment, 142.

New Hampshire. Supreme court ruled that state constitution permitted Manchester Housing Authority to erect public parking garage as part of redevelopment project, 43.

New Jersey. Appellate division of New Jersey superior court held that owners of buildings condemned by housing authority were not entitled to interest or reimbursement for real estate taxes for period between time properties were declared blighted and condemnation, 43. Supreme court of New Jersey ruled that landlord's failure to make repairs and replacements of facilities vital to maintain rented residential premises in livable condition permits tenant to make such repairs and to deduct the cost thereof from future rents, 90. The superior court held invalid a zoning ordinance that would operate to produce only high rental apartments, primarily for families without children, 500. The superior court of New Jersey, Middlesex County, invalidated a township ordinance establishing minimum lot sizes, minimum floor space requirements, and limitations on one- and two-bedroom apartments, 608.

New York. Appellate division held that urban renewal condemnation proceedings instituted by City of Buffalo constituted a de facto taking of property of displaced printing firm, notwithstanding absence of physical invasion of property or direct legal restraint on its use, 43. United States district court for southern district of New York issued preliminary injunction restraining Department of Housing and Urban Development and New York City Housing and Development Administration from demolishing building or evicting residents therefrom pursuant to an urban renewal project, 89. United States district court for southern district of New York held that procedure for notifying tenants of summary repossession action for nonpayment of rent did not violate due process and equal protection clauses of 14th amendment, 89. United States court of appeals affirmed district court order dismissing complaint of tenant who alleged she was being evicted in violation of due process under 14th amendment, 141. United States court of appeals affirmed district court judgment that city of Lacawanna was guilty of racial discrimination and had violated plaintiffs' constitutional rights by blocking development of low-income housing project in white ward, 192. Appellate division reversed trial court decision that ruled that, whenever applicant for admission to public housing project is rejected, full evidentiary hearing must be held, 192. United States district court for the southern district refused to issue preliminary injunction to restrain two public housing turnkey projects in Town of Ramapo, Rockland County, 355. United States court of appeals reversed ruling by appellate division and held that, except for physical invasion of landowner's property or direct legal restraint on its use, there can be no de facto taking of property by city government, 356.

North Carolina. United States court of appeals held that tenant in federally-assisted public housing unit must be accorded due process hearing on merits of eviction, 141.

Oregon. United States district court held the Department of Transportation's interpretation of Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1968 to be overly restrictive and, therefore, not binding on state administrative agencies, 356.

Pennsylvania. United States court of appeals for third circuit enjoined payment of rent subsidies by Department of Housing and Urban Development for Philadelphia urban renewal area project on ground that project would have effect of increasing already high concentration of low-income black residents, 42. Supreme court held that, where tenant had deposited rent into escrow account pursuant to state's rent withholding act, because premises were certified as unfit for habitation, landlord was not entitled to escrow deposit, though he had made repairs, because, after six months, premises had again been certified as unfit, 142. United States court of appeals held that secretary of Department of Housing and Urban Development violated statutory requirements by denying "citizen participation" in model cities program, 194. A three-judge federal court at Philadelphia held that sale of low-income tenant's property under distraint statute violated due process unless hearing was afforded, 195. United States court of appeals for third circuit upheld Department of Labor requirement, under what is known as "the Philadelphia plan," that bidders on federal or federally-assisted construction contract submit action program for employment of minority workers in six skilled crafts, 357.

Rhode Island. Superior court held that a 1970 Rhode Island statute that prohibited increasing a public housing tenant's rent when his income increased did not apply to tenants in projects operating under the United States Housing Act of 1937, 498.

Texas. Court of appeals ruled that claims based on oral agreement, were barred by Texas statute of frauds where mortgage of real estate was involved or where oral agreement could not be performed within one year from date of agreement, 142. United States district court for western district held that owner of federally subsidized rent supplement project must, in accordance with first amendment and due process clause of Constitution, provide his tenant with notice alleging good cause and prove that such cause exists, before the tenant can be deprived of his occupancy, 356.

Virginia. The circuit court of Fairfax County, Virginia, entered declaratory judgment invalidating zoning amendment to county code, 608.

Washington, D.C. United States court of appeals held that tenants of public housing facilities of National Capital Housing Authority are permitted to sue federal government for adequate maintenance and repair of such facilities, 141. United States court of appeals held that tenants living in low-rent housing projects of National Capital Housing Authority were not entitled to hearing before rent increase was adopted, 142. United States court of appeals ruled that tenant who claimed housing violations on part of landlord could be ordered prospectively to pay partial rent into court registry pending trial, but that order could not cover back rent for period prior to date of order, 142. United States district court granted preliminary injunction to restrain proposed increase in rent to tenants residing in federally-assisted Section 221(d)(3) housing project, 194. Court of appeals ruled that two default judgments entered prior to landlord's suit for possession for nonpayment of rent rendered validity of lease res judicata (not eligible for judication) but held, further, that the tenant could raise the defense of housing code violations alleged to have existed during the period for which rent was claimed in the current action, 357. United States court of appeals circuit affirmed order of Securities and Exchange Commission that required subsidiaries of public utility holding company to divest themselves of interests in low- and moderate-income housing projects, 357. Superior court held that the seventh amendment preserves the right to jury trial in summary landlord-tenant proceedings, 498. The United States district court for the District of Columbia held that tenants of nonprofit rental housing built under Section 221(d)(3) of the National Housing Act were not entitled to participate in the procedure that resulted in rent increases, 607.

West Virginia. United States court of appeals for northern district barred state court action against construction of turnkey project that had been transferred to federal control under default clause in annual contributions contract, 141.
